

Permission to use Material

In addition to consultancy work and clinical practice, I am involved in both teaching and research. In these contexts, in order to advance both my learning and the learning of the therapy profession, it is essential to draw upon examples from practice. There may be times, therefore, when it would be useful to draw on aspects of our work together. Should this be the case, I undertake to treat all such material with respect and to make appropriate changes to it in order to protect your privacy and ensure anonymity.

From time to time, I also write for publication. Again, in so doing, I hope to make some contribution to the advancement of the therapy profession and your permission to utilise material, should it become appropriate, would be an essential aspect of any such contribution. Should I use any aspect of our work together in this way, I again undertake to treat all such material with respect and to make all necessary and appropriate changes to it in order to protect your privacy.

Below you will find 2 'statements of permission'. I should be grateful if you could read each statement carefully and sign and date each statement with which you are in agreement.

Should you have any concerns or queries regarding any aspect of any of these agreements, you are welcome to raise them with me for discussion.

With good wishes
